Today, Google is a creative workplace where employees share ideas with each other. Larry Page and Sergey Brin, who founded Google, are available during the week to talk with their employees and answer questions. This open environment has resulted in many new ideas. In 2011, the company released a program called the Google Art Project that helped people explore the world's top museums from their computer. As of 2018, Google was continuing its work on a self-driving car. In the future, this car could help people who can't see well to drive. The company extends its services to the community, too. In 2008, it started an art contest for students. Every year, the winner's artwork appears on its homepage for one day.

Google believes that creativity is important, both in the workplace and in the community. In addition to producing famous Internet products, Google gives people opportunities to be creative, which leads to success.

Ayumi : Well, what do they say, Steve?

Steve : There are various opinions. Some people agree but others don't. What do you think?

Ayumi : I personally don't like the changes because they make us quite confused. I've been studying by looking at the past exams but these sudden changes seem very unfair.

Steve : I know. I'm quite surprised that they started including a speaking test in the English exam.

Ayumi : That's understandable when you think about the world being globalized now, but the changes came too suddenly. I don't have enough time to prepare.

Steve : Well, if you don't like those ideas made by our government, why don't you express yourself about them?

Ayumi : Yeah, but how?

Steve : You are 18, so you have a right to vote. You have to learn to appreciate the fact that you live in a democratic society.

Ayumi : I know but can a single vote change society?

Steve : Many young people think that way and they just don't go to vote. Society won't change without their voting.

Ayumi : You are right, I'll express myself through voting.

Rick : Wow, that's a long time.

Maki : Yes, and according to this book, in 2018, 11.5% of Japanese people had a dog while the percentage was 25% in the U.K.

Rick : No wonder so many of my friends have a dog back home.

Maki : It also says holding a pet lowers one's heart rate and stress levels, and people with dogs sleep better and visit the doctor less.

Rick : I see. Does the book say why?

Maki : Yes. It says it's because dogs keep their owners active and social. You see, they have to walk their dog every day and they often talk to other dog walkers.
