“It is never too late to start new things.” This is certainly true of Wakamiya Masako, an 87-year-old programmer. She ^{*1}developed a smartphone game ^{*2}app, “Hinadan” in 2017. Because of this, she was invited to a big meeting called the ^{*3}WWDC in the US. There, Apple ^{*4}CEO Tim Cook introduced Wakamiya as “the oldest ^{*5}developer.” The day before the meeting, she had a chance to talk with him. Tim said to her, “You really ^{*6}inspired me.”

Wakamiya was born in Tokyo. After she finished high school, she started working for a major bank. Just before she ^{*7}retired at the age of 60, she bought a computer. While caring for her mother at home, she spent time learning online and enjoyed the Internet.

She was over 80 when she started developing game apps herself. She bought some books to try programming. When she didn’t understand something, she asked people for advice through the Internet.

“At the age of 60 my world became wider. I got wings!” she says.

^{*1}develop : 開発する ^{*2}app(s) : アプリ

^{*3}WWDC (the Apple Worldwide Developers Conference) :

アップル社が開催する世界開発者会議

^{*4}CEO : 最高経営責任者 ^{*5}developer : 開発者

^{*6}inspire(d) : 鼓舞する ^{*7}retire(d) : 退職する

a. Ms. Wakamiya was invited to the WWDC because { ① she started a new business in the US.

② she wrote some books for game apps.
③ she made a game app for smartphones.

b. Ms. Wakamiya { ① talked with Tim Cook.
② missed a chance to meet Tim Cook.
③ introduced Tim Cook as the Apple CEO.

c. After Ms. Wakamiya left high school, she worked { ① at Apple.

② for a bank.
③ as a programmer.

d. After Ms. Wakamiya retired from her job,

{ ① she bought a computer to develop game apps.
② she took care of her mother and learned through the Internet.
③ she entered an online school to learn programming.

e. Ms. Wakamiya feels

{ ① she is too old to start new things.
② it is difficult to learn something new.
③ a computer and the Internet made her world bigger.
