When AI Gore was a little boy, growing up in the U.S., his parents left him powerful memories. While walking around their family farm, his father told him how important the Earth is. His mother read to him a science book which warned about the dangers of destroying the environment. As far as he remembers, it's the only book she read to him.

He studied politics at university. And in the 1990s, he became a powerful politician in the U.S. But his love for the Earth also encouraged him to work for the environment. In 2006, he made his first movie about climate change. It was highly valued around the world, and the next year, he won the Nobel Peace Prize for his efforts. In 2017, Al Gore made his second movie. He said, "In the past ten years, more and more people are experiencing extreme weather." He suggested we should take action to save our planet.

Tomoko: Hi, John. How are you?

John: Fine, thanks. I'm going on a business trip to Osaka next week. I'm looking forward to it

Tomoko: Great. Are you flying there?

John: No, I'll take the Shinkansen from Tokyo. I heard it's just a couple of hours away on that train. Besides, I want to see the Japanese countryside, including Mt. Fuji.

Tomoko: That's a good idea. Have you bought a ticket?

John: Not yet, because I wanted to ask you which seat I should get to look at the mountain.

Tomoko: You're leaving from Tokyo so you should take a window seat on the right-hand side facing toward Osaka.

John: Thanks. I hope the weather will be good enough.

Tomoko: Don't worry. You've got two chances because you're also coming back to Tokyo, right?

John: No, because it will be dark when I come back after the meeting.

Tomoko: Well, if you are so eager to see Mt. Fuji, we can plan a trip together. I haven't been there for a long time.

John: That would be great. I also want to try the special noodle soup there.

Tomoko: I love that dish. It comes with very thick noodles in hot soup with lots of vegetables.

I'll take you to my favorite restaurant.

Kenta: Hi, Helen. Did you enjoy your winter holiday?

Helen: Yes, I did. My host parents cooked lots of Japanese food and I enjoyed eating it. How was your holiday, Kenta?

Kenta: I also enjoyed myself, but I ate too much because my relatives came over and my mom cooked lots of food. Now I need to do some exercise.

Helen: Don't worry about it. Japanese food is basically very healthy.

Kenta: Why do you think so?

Helen: Because, traditionally the Japanese diet has been based on rice and food from the sea. These foods are low in fat.

Kenta: How about your food in America?

Helen: Well, we eat more meat and milk products which are higher in fat. In fact, the average Japanese person eats about eight kilograms of beef a year while the average American eats over 40.

Kenta: Wow, you eat five times more beef than we do.

Helen: Yes. That's why I'm saying that you don't need to worry even if you ate a little too much.

Kenta: I see, but my mom cooked lots of food like fried chicken and pizza. She also served very sweet cakes for dessert.

Helen: Oh, your food is getting similar to ours! Shall we exercise together?

Kenta: Yes, that's a good idea.
