18 Question a. Man: May I help you?

Woman: Can I have a train ticket to London for tomorrow morning?

Man: Certainly. You have two choices. One is an 8:30 express train, arriving at 9:30. The other is a 7:30 local train arriving at 9:00, which is cheaper.

Woman: Well, I would rather save money than time.

Question: What time will the woman probably leave for London?

Question b. Woman: This is the Zensho repair shop. May I help you?

Man: Yes. My car hit a wall yesterday. I'd like to have it checked. Woman: Of course. I'll put you through to our mechanic. Please hold on.

Man: Yes, thank you.

Question: What will the man probably do next?

20 Question c. Man: You're home very late. Have you had dinner yet?

Woman: My boss gave me some sandwiches in the office, and I ate them while she drove me home.

Man: I baked some cakes. They're on the table in the dining room.

Woman: Thanks. But I'm full now. I will try them tomorrow. Question: Where did the woman eat the sandwiches?

21 Question d. Man: That must be a good book. You've been reading for five hours.

Woman: I've been enjoying classic novels recently. I borrowed ten books from the library last week.

Man: I thought you just read comic books. Woman: No way! I'm starting the seventh now.

Question: How many books has the woman finished reading?

22 Question e. Man: Have you visited the newly opened French restaurant?

Woman: Is that the one on 6th street?

Man: No, it's on 5th street. You're probably thinking of the Italian restaurant that opened last month.

Woman: Well, I haven't been to either the French or the Italian restaurant.

Question: Which statement is true about this conversation?

Noise pollution is sound at a level that may lead to bad effects in humans or other living creatures. Recently, noise pollution is making oceans noisier than ever and harming sea life, according to an article in a science magazine. Researchers looked at thousands of studies on ocean sound and its effects on wildlife. They found that noise pollution has increased over the years. It's making life hard for sea creatures. "For fish, sound is probably a better way to sense their environment than light," says Francis Juanes, who is one of the article's authors. But noise pollution stops sea animals from hearing natural sounds. This comes from human activities like shipping and building. As animals avoid noisy areas, their living areas decrease.

However, there are possible solutions. These include wind-powered ships and quieter engines. Also, governments could pass laws limiting noise. "We have noise standards for cars and trucks," says another author, Carlos Duarte. "Why should we not have them for ships?"

Nancy: Hi, Kazuya. Congratulations on passing the entrance exam!

Kazuya: Thank you very much, Nancy, but how did you find out?

Nancy: I heard the news from your mom when I met her at the post office yesterday.

Kazuya: Oh, I see. Anyway, I'm so relieved that I realized my dream.

Nancy: Was your dream just to pass the entrance exam?

Kazuya: At this stage, yes. I studied hard to pass the exam. But my future dream is to be a politician. That's why I've decided to major in politics at university.

Nancy: That makes sense. If you become a politician, what will you do?

Kazuya: Well, I want to change this country into a better place.

Nancy: What do you mean by that?

Kazuya: Now in Japan, we're facing an aging society. Many of us are concerned about what will happen in our old age. I want to solve this problem.

Nancy: How? It seems very difficult. Tell me your best idea for solving it.

Kazuya: Well, actually I don't have any good ideas yet. So I want to find some possible solutions during my time in university.

Nancy: Good for you, Kazuya. I hope you don't forget your goals.

Kazuya: Of course, I won't. I'll keep them in mind.

Hayato: Hello, I'm Hayato. I'm a freshman. I think we live next door to each other. Nice to meet you.

Amy: Nice to meet you, too. I'm Amy, from Sydney, Australia. I'm a big anime fan. That's why I came to Tokyo. I'd like to learn Japanese here at university, and I also want to visit some places I've seen in my favorite movies.

Hayato: I know a famous cafe near here that was in a popular anime movie. I can show you if you'd like.

Amy: Oh, Thank you. How well do you know Tokyo?

Hayato: Pretty well. I was born and raised in a suburb of Tokyo. Our house is more than an hour away from university, so I'll live in a room here instead of at home.

Amy: Wow! Your parents must miss you. My mom sends me an email twice a day.

Hayato: Maybe. Well, I'm looking for some boxes I sent from home. Do you know where I can pick them up?
