Hedy Lamarr was a famous movie star. She was born in 1914 in *¹Vienna, Austria. After she acted in some European movies, she moved to the United States. From the 1930s to 1950s, she appeared in about thirty movies. She was also the head of her own movie company from 1946 to 1949.

Many people knew her for her beautiful face and acting. Maybe they didn't know she also loved science and thinking about new ideas. When she was only five years old, she took a music box *²apart and then put it back together.

During World War II, she worked with her friend George Antheil, a musician. Both Hedy and George were really interested in inventing. They invented a way to send messages through the air. Today, this makes *³Wi-Fi and *⁴Bluetooth possible, so Hedy is called “the mother of Wi-Fi.”

Hedy Lamarr died in 2000. She lived a long and exciting life. She was a shining star in movies, and her bright ideas continue to shine in our daily lives today.

*¹Vienna, Austria : オーストリアのウィーン *²apart : バラバラに

*³Wi-Fi : ワイファイ *⁴Bluetooth : ブルートゥース
